A GAME BY TREAT IT QUEER, ASTERISCO, GOGHI&GOGHI

A4 PRINTABLE VERSION

Ask&Tell! is an interactive, psychoeducative game about sex, meant to foster conversations about sex, sexuality, and sexual health among queer young adults, centering experiences of chronic illness, neurodivergence, and disability.

Ask&Tell! can be played and enjoyed by partners, friends, acquaintances, students... really, by anyone! This game was also designed as a possible tool for (sex) therapists and their clients.

(BUT WE'RE NOT GATEKEEPING...)

About the game

Ask&Tell! does not provide particular knowledge or resources, but encourages conversation and personal engagement with under-represented topics in sex education.

This queer-led, community-based project would not have been possible without input and hard work from many people who shared professional knowledge, skills, and lived experiences.

To meet the needs and wishes of the thriving community we are a part of and work for, we conducted community needs-assessment research prior to development, the results of which have been published and presented at multiple international conferences.

Development was overseen by sex, relationship-systemic, and cognitive-

What's in the box?

Ask&Tell! is made of:

- 90 Content Cards
  - 75 Question Cards (25 per level)
  - 15 Action Cards (5 per level)
- 5 Thermometer Cards
- 4 Bonus Cards
- 1 Instruction Booklet

Content Card levels are subjective. What is easy for one can be triggering for another. To communicate comfort levels, use the Thermometer Cards.

Thermometer Cards form a colour scale, green on one end and red on the other.
GREEN = easy, comfortable topic.
RED = possible trigger.

Bonus Cards can be played by any player, any time. Simply choose one from the pile and show it. Once resolved, place it back with the others, ready to be used again.

About + Booklet (front)

How to play (2 players)

1. SETTING UP THE GAME

Separate Content Cards by Level, shuffle, and place them face-down near all players. Each pile contains 25 Question Cards and 5 Action Cards. Place the 5 Thermometer Cards and 4 Bonus Cards face-up in the centre of the play area.

2. BEGINNING THE GAME

Before anything else, agree on a Safe Word. The specific word doesn't matter, but it shouldn't come up in regular conversation. Our advice: the sillier, the better!

Establish how many Spoons you have, from 1 to 20. This represents how much energy you have:
1 Spoon = no energy at all.
20 Spoons = energy surplus.

Your Spoons determine how many Content Cards you will resolve during the game. However, if players' Spoons differ by 3 or more, agree on a number of Spoons that feels comfortable to every player. (NOTE: your Spoons may change during a game, and that's ok!)

3. PROGRESSING THE GAME

The player with the most Spoons takes the first turn. If tied, whoever ate soup the most recently starts!

Player A draws a Content Card from Level 1, 2, or 3, and reads the prompt aloud to Player B. (You can choose levels in sequence, or mix them up.)

Before answering the question or performing the suggested action, Player B indicates their comfort level using the Thermometer Cards.

NOTE: Some prompts may seem simple but can be triggering for some players. Rating a Content Card as RED on the Thermometer indicates intense discomfort or a potential trigger.

If this happens, be patient, reassess Spoons if necessary, and remember that you can always decline to answer a question or perform an action.

There is no time limit. Each player gets to act at their own comfortable pace.

Once the question has been answered or the action performed, Player B places the resolved Content Card face-down to the side of the play area. As more cards are set down, the illustrated backs will develop into a collaborative Landscape. Cards can be positioned however players choose.

Repeat this process, alternating between players until each has resolved as many Content Cards as they have Spoons.

4. BONUS!

A player may use a Bonus Card at any time. Simply choose one from the face-up pile and resolve its effect before placing it back with the others, ready to be used again. The effect of each Bonus Card is described on it. Bonus Cards make the game safer — and funnier! — to play.

5. ENDING THE GAME

The game ends as outlined above, or if a player uses the agreed-upon Safe Word.

Take a look at the Landscape the resolved cards have painted. What does it look like? Which graphical elements speak to you? Is there a reason why a certain card is closer or further away from another? Is there a pattern in the placement? Does the Landscape resemble one from a previous game? Reflect on the Landscape and what it might mean, to you and to other players. Now, take the knowledge you've gained from the game, and continue to ask&tell!

A final note: These instructions are guidelines, not rules. Your comfort is the most important element of Ask&Tell!, so feel free to engage with it in the way that makes the most sense to you.

BOOKLET

Ask&Tell!

Instructions for players

the meta-interpretation of the Landscape that clients created.

While games of Ask&Tell! played in the context of therapy can be conducted entirely under therapist supervision, we recommend that clients who are comfortable and autonomous enough take the game home to continue playing with those close to them. Clients are thus incentivized to think about and have additional conversations on the topics in environments and contexts outside their therapist's office. Insights can then be discussed during future consultations.

Therapist variant

With its exploratory nature and aim to foster conversations centering sex, chronic illness, pain, neurodivergence, and disability, Ask&Tell! can be a useful tool for (sex) therapists and their clients.

If used as part of a therapy session or program, Ask&Tell! should only be played using Question Cards, with Action Cards and Bonus Cards set aside.

Because therapeutic consultations are time-limited, use Spoon Level only to represent the client's energy. We still strongly encourage (sex) therapists to agree on a Safe Word with their client, and Thermometer Cards should be used as a visual indicator of a client's comfort level with any given question.

At the end of the game, therapists can initiate a discussion regarding

"Let's talk about sex baby / Let's talk about you and me"
Salt-N-Pepa, "Let's Talk About Sex"

Ask&Tell! is an interactive game about the intersection of sex, queerness, neurodivergence, chronic illness, and disability, centering on conversations and experiences.

So if you're ready to talk about sex... ask about it, and tell it!

Ask&Tell! can be played with friends, comfortable strangers and/or partners. Finding a quiet, comfortable, and private place to play is strongly advised. Ask&Tell! is best enjoyed when all parties involved feel as comfortable and at ease — physically and mentally — as possible.

behavioural therapists, medical doctors, researchers, and global health professionals, many of whom are queer, trans, neurodivergent, chronically ill, disabled, and of varying cultural and racial backgrounds.

Ask&Tell! was developed as part of an Erasmus+ KA2 Small-scale Partnership grant, and is a collaboration between the Treat it Queer Foundation, Asterisco, and Goghi&Goghi.

MULTI-SESSION VARIANT

Ask&Tell! is meant to be a flexible game that players can adapt to their comfort level. Players can choose to play through all their allotted Content Cards in one session, or to play separate of a few cards each, until the total is reached. In cases of play spanning multiple sessions, different Landscapes will be created each session.

MULTI-PLAYER VARIANT

While Ask&Tell! is optimized for 2 players, it can also be played in a group (and what interesting conversations that might lead to!). In this case, don't feel like you are constrained by the rules; find the way to play the game and engage with the content as you see fit, in a way that feels comfortable to all players.

Happy playing!
